

As an American Eagle Flight attendant and more than occasional passenger myself, I am opposed to airplanes becoming virtual phone booths in the sky. When I travel, I value relaxation and quiet.

As an attendant, it is difficult enough to get full passenger compliance with FAA regs. I cannot imagine competing with telephone-connected individuals who at present treat human interaction as alien life form.

Please limit the use of cell phone in flight. Give people the option to advise their loved one of departure and arrival -- then off the aircraft they can jabber at will.
